It is however not a fact that our teachers do not import human values to the taught. The irony is that they preach but do not practise them. For instance, if a teacher himself smokes, he cannot virtually influence the taught to give up this bad habit. The teachings, therefore, become effective if the teacher himself observes the code of conduct in actual practice. The teachers must subordinate money making to character training of the pupils, sacrifice vested interests for the broad interests of society, cultivate the habit of wide reading, have close watch over pupils activities with a corrective attitude, and preach what they practice. The more the number of ideal teachers, the more firmly connected will be the educational values of integrity, discipline, diligence self-sacrifice, co-operation, social justice, magnanimity, secularism and humanism among the students. Since education is a bio-polar activity both the poles, teachers and taughts, must pay due attention to the value system in education. If the former adheres to the educational values, the latter is bound to do so.
